The Lion of India: Netaji Subhas Chandra Bose

"Give me blood, and I shall give you freedom!"
— Netaji Subhas Chandra Bose

📖 Short Story: The Boy Who Loved His Country

Long ago, when India was ruled by foreign kings, a smart young boy named Subhas Chandra Bose grew up in Cuttack. Subhas was an extraordinary student. He topped his class and even cleared one of the hardest exams in the world—the Indian Civil Services exam in England!

Anyone else would have taken the comfortable government job, but Subhas said, "I cannot serve foreign rulers while my countrymen are not free!" He gave up his wealthy job and returned to India to fight for freedom.

People loved his courage so much that they fondly called him "Netaji" (Respected Leader). He organized the Azad Hind Fauj (Indian National Army), inviting brave men and women to unite under the national flag with the motivating slogan "Jai Hind!"

🌟 Quick Fun Facts About Netaji:

- Famous Greeting: He popularized the national greeting "Jai Hind!" (Victory to India).
- All-Women Regiment: He formed the Rani of Jhansi Regiment, one of the world's first all-women military units!
- Parakram Diwas: His birthday on January 23rd is celebrated in India as Courage Day!
